

Supporting and promoting the art of fashion, the culture of fashion, the future of fashion

Hackney Gazette - July 2006

Sofia Mendes, 15

Model girls – from left to right, back row: 15-year-olds Serina Lopez, Mohima Karim, Sana Naman, Humaira Ahmed, Uzma Ayub, Mumina Begum, Folasade Amusa, Erica Sesay and Kerasha Small; front row: Eleanor Sluman, Ruth Gassama, Sabina Asania and Cansu Aladag

Shipshape and Hackney fashion

FASHION fanatics looked shipshape on the catwalk as they made their own outfits with a nautical theme.

Year 10 students from six secondary schools in Hackney strutted their stuff down the catwalk at the London College of Fashion on Friday, wearing clothes designed during a week-long fashion workshop.

The students were invited to take part in the summer workshop at the college on Mare Street, Hackney to learn how to turn fashion ideas into clothes.

The group were treated to sessions with fashion industry experts as well as make-up and fashion stylists.

The project was set up by Fashion Awareness Direct and funded by Aimhigher, two educational charities, and saw 14 and 15-year-olds from Clapton Girls' Technology College in Laura Place, Lower Clapton, Stoke Newington

Media and Arts College in Clissold Road, Hackney Free and Parochial School in Paragon Road, Hackney, Haggerston Girls' School in Weymouth Terrace, Skinners' Company's Girls' School in Stamford Hill and Our Lady's Convent in Amhurst Park, Stamford Hill, take part.