Fashion students set for final fling

TWO talented students from Hackney have clinched a place as finalists in the 2010 Fashion Futures 2 competition.

Charlie Ibooullie, 17, from Hackney Community College in Falkirk Street, Hoxton, and Misbah Siddique, 17, from Clapton Girls' Technology College in Laura Place, Lower Clapton, will join 25 young people from London and Manchester to present their designs on the London Fashion Week catwalk in September.

The Fashion Futures project, organised by creative charity Fashion Awareness Direct, is a competition for students from schools in east

London and the greater Manchester area to showcase individual flair.

The finalists, chosen from 100 students, were announced at the end of a workshop and exhibition at Rich Mix in Bethnal Green Road.

They now have a chance of breaking into the fashion industry.
